

Food Policy Councils in Action

experiences, lessons and works-in-progress

The Center for Food Studies at The American University of Rome and the Rome Food Policy Council are organizing the workshop “Food Policy Councils in Action: Experiences, Lessons, and Works-in-Progress” that will take place in Rome on June 20-21, 2025, with the patronage of the University of Luxembourg, the University of Florence, the CURSA, and Reti Politiche Locali del Cibo.

This workshop will focus on the everyday challenges that FPC face.

FPC representative of FPC from all over the world will find a safe space to discuss their experiences, successes, failures & works-in-progress.

Increasingly, cities are turning to Food Policy Councils (FPCs) to develop integrated food policies that cut across sectors and levels of the food system .

But how can FPCs truly unlock their potential and help local administrations rethink food systems from the ground up?

PARTICIPATE!

Access www.fpc2025.com to participate either in person or online. Register for the workshop to create a profile, seek funding, and become part of our community!

